Philippuse geþûhte þæt hē leng mid folcgefeohtum wið hié ne meahte, ac hē wæs mid hlôþum on hî hergende, 3, 7; S. 118, 18.

folc-gerēfa. Add: Folcgeroebum actionaris, Wrt. Voc. ii. 98, 38. Folcgerēfum actionariis (printed ac dignariis), 4, 22.

folc-gesîþas. Substitute: folc-gesîþ, es; m. An officer of the nation (in contrast with dryht-gesîþ?):—Folcgesîðas þe mē mid sceoldon mearce healdan, Gen. 2134. Þæt ehtode ealdor þeóde wið þām nēhstum folcgesîðum: 'Þæt eówer fela geseah, þeóde mīne . . .' Þā cwæð sē þe wæs cyninges rāswa . . ., Dan. 412. Þeódric hēht folcgesîðas healdan þone hererinc, Met. 1, 70.

folc-gestealla. Substitute: A comrade in arms (? cf. fyrd-gestealla):—Bigstandað mē strange geneátas, þā ne willað mē æt þām strîðe geswîcan . . . hié habbað mē tô hearran gecorene . . . mid swilcum mæg man rǣd geþencean, fôn mid swilcum folcgesteallan (=-um?) with such may one devise counsel, take (counsel) with such comrades, Gen. 287.

folc-getæl. Substitute: The number of a people or army (v. folc; I. 1 a):—Wæs on ânra gehwām ālesen under lindum on folcgetæl fîftig cista in each tribe were picked out for service, elected into the number of the folk that should fight, fifty troops, Exod. 229.

folc-geþrang. Dele. See ge-þringan.

folc-her[e]paþ, es; m. The public road, highway:—On ðone folc-hearpað; ondlang ðæs hearpaðes, C. D. iii. 393, 14: 463, 17. Cf. þeód-herpaþ.

folc-land. Add:—Gif se cyning mīnum suna geunnan wille ðes folc-londes tô ðæm bôclonde, ðonne habbe and brûce, C. D. ii. 120, 35. Cyninges folcland, 65, 1. See also p. ix, and N. E. D. folk-land.

folc-lār. For 'Cot. . . . Lye' substitute:—Folclāre omeliae verba, Wrt. Voc. ii. 65, 42. In þām folclārum þæs godspelles (in homiliis euangelii), Gr. D. 290, 10: 286, 7.

folc-leásung. Add: uttering false and slanderous statements such as are prejudicial to the public welfare. Slander, as affecting an individual, which entailed the same penalty as that for folk-leásung, is treated in the following:—Sē þe ôðerne mid wôge forsecgan wille, þ hē âðor oþþe feó oþþe freme þe wyrsa sý . . . sý hē his tungan scyldig, Ll. Th. i. 266, 22–25: 384, 23–26 (de poena convitiatorum). See also L. Hen. I. c. 34, § 7: 59, § 13. Folcleásung seems to be the same crime as that referred to in later lawbooks, quoted Ll. Th. i. 82, 'Sunt quaedam atroces injuriae . . . sicut de inventoribus malorum rumorum, unde pax possit exterminari.' Cf. too leasing-maker in Scotch law, one who utters untrue and slanderous statements such as are likely to prejudice the relations between the king and his subjects. But perhaps the public character of the crime, indicated by folc, may consist in the false and slanderous statements being made to a court of law. Cf. L. Hen. I. c. 34, § 7: Qui aliquem erga justiciam accusabit . . . et mendaciuni denique pernoscatur, linguam perdat. Cf. folc-wôh.

folc-lic. Add: (1) that concerns the whole people, public, national:—Hî woldon ferian mid folclicum wurðmynte þone hālgan līchaman, and lægan innan þære cyrcan they wanted to give the body a public funeral, Hml. S. 32, 174. Hî gewæpnode ût fērdon mid folclicum truman accepit unusquisque vir arma sua et egressi sunt, Hml. A. 113, 356. ge-. Add: Both ge- and gi- are used in the oldest glossaries : e. g. on p. 48 of O. E. T. nine words with the prefix occur ; in four cases both the Epinal and Erfurt glosses have gi-, in one they have ge-, in two the Epinal has ge- where the Erfurt has gi-, and in two the Epinal has gi- where the other has ge-. In each case the Corpus Gloss. has ge-. In this glossary, however, gi- is found, e. g. gi-brec, 2152, and in later glossaries also, e. g. gi-mynd, Wrt. Voc. ii. 53, 73. Besides the forms given may be noted ga-eádun, Erf. 75 ; gy-byrdid, Ep. 228. In the Durham Ritual the regular form is gi-.

ge-férlic; adj. Social; gregalis, Germ. 399, 391. v. un-geférlic, un-geférlīce.

ge-férlīþlīce; adv. Sociably:—Heom bām wæs forgifen þ hī moston on ānre eardungstōwe geférlīđlīce (-līflīce, v. l., socialiter) lifian; þām eác gelamp þ hī samod geférlīđlīce (-līflīce, v. l.) férdon of līchoman, Gr. D. 313, 23–25.

ge-férness (?), e; f. Going:—For þon þe mycelre tīde ǽr þǽre hālignesse hūs geclǽnsod beón sceolde and seó gastlīþnes þæs Crīstes wīscseáweres and seó gifernes gebūend wæs þæs Crīstes engles and seó heall þæs hālgan gāstes mundabatur enim longo tempore sacrificii domus, sanctitatis hospitium, metatum (meatum, v. l.) metatoris Christi, angeli domicilium (v. Archiv cxxii, p. 248), Bl. H. 163, 10–13. The original is so imperfectly reproduced by the translation, that it is difficult to connect the several corresponding parts, and to understand what the translation means. To hospitium corresponds (though it does not properly translate it) gastlīþnes; perhaps to meatum (not metatum) corresponds gifernes = (?) ge-férnes. Though ge-férnes does not occur elsewhere, yet on the analogy of ge-leórnes transitus, ge-leóran transire, it might serve as a gloss to meatus alongside ge-féran meare. Gi- for ge- is not used in Bl. H., but gy- occurs once, in gy-fylnes, 145, 16. Mr. Bradley suggests the emendation seó gisternes gebūennes as translating domicilium. Dr. Max Förster suggests gife[n]nes. v. Archiv cxxii, p. 248.

ge-lēd, -loed, -leōd, gloed glosses catasta (catasta instrumentum torquendi, genus lecti ferrei, quo, impositis Christianis, ignis supponebatur, Migne):—Catasta, genus supplicii vel woepe, eculeo simile, nomen ludi vel gelēd, quadrupalium, Wrt. Voc. ii. 129, 45. Geloed (gloed, Ep., geleód, Erf.) catasta, Txts. 47, 363. ¶ the same obscure word seems intended in the following two (not independent) glosses:—Gæleð catesta, Wrt. Voc. i. 288, 24: ii. 17, 5. Of the five forms which here gloss catasta the only one to which a meaning may easily be given is gloed, which elsewhere translates carbo. This form might apply to the fire used in the form of torture denoted by catasta. There seems no root with which to connect -lōd-, mutated forms of which would appear as -loed-, -lēd, -leód- (?), and gæleð looks like a gloss to cantat.
